CONVENTION CITY OF FLORIDA

A Few Facts Collected with Special Reference to the Coming Meeting of State Teachers

To those teachers of Florida who may desire to attend the state teachers' meeting to convene in Ocala from December 27 to December 31, 1901, and who have never been here or are not familiar with the town and the objects of interest around it, the following facts may have more than a passing interest and we hope to induce some to attend the meeting who might otherwise decide to forego the trip.

The land which now constitutes the town of Ocala and its surroundings was noted for the fertility of its soil and the large Indian village, probably the largest in the territory which now constitutes the commonwealth of Florida. In the days when DeSoto made his famous march from Tampa to the banks of the Mississippi river, and was known as the "province of Ocala."

Marion county, of which Ocala is the county seat, was set apart from Alachua in 1843. Marion has been aptly termed the banner county of the state, because of the uniform fertility of its lands and their productiveness, of which it is claimed that there are more acres than in any other county in the state.

For three years after Marion county was formed the county seat was located at Fort King, several miles east of the present site of the "Brick City," then a military trading port of great importance and later the scene of the tragedy which ended the life of the fort's commanding officer, Colonel Thompson, whom the famous Indian chief, Osceola, ambushed and slew because during Osceola's imprisonment his wife, who was reported as a beautiful half breed, was seized and sold into slavery, and Osceola held Colonel Thompson personally responsible for this act.

Colonel Thompson, his wife and a lieutenant took a stroll one afternoon and during this walk the colonel and his lieutenant were shot and killed, but Osceola spared the life of the colonel's wife.

Traces of this famous fort are still visible and souvenirs can yet be found around the ground where its embattled walls sixty years ago defied the savagery of the aborigines.

Ocala's growth was slow for many years and the first impetus it received was when a number of prominent planters from South Carolina invaded the rich soil of Marion county and established their sugar mills and cotton gins.

Then it was that the social life of Ocala developed on a plane of regal grandeur and brilliancy that few places in the state could approach, and some of those who led in this rich material march and the sweet and gracious amenities of life are still among us in the highly respected and worthy citizens, the Martins, Garys, Owens and Vogts.

From 1850 to 1861, when the war broke out, the population of the town grew from 200 to 1500 persons, and its commercial importance and trade was excelled by few, if any, towns in the state.

It may be interesting to note the fearful effects the ravages of the civil war had on the commercial fortune and population of Ocala. Its people, from 1860 to 1868, dwindled from 1500 to 200 souls, and many of the fertile plantations referred to grew up in weeds, business was paralyzed and depopulation almost followed.

It took ten years to double the population of the town.

Ocala's best means of communication with the outer world, up to 1881, was by way of the famous waters of Silver Springs, its run, and the weird waters of the Ocklawaha river. The town was connected with the springs by a steam tramway.

Since that date railroads have linked us with the peoples of the world.

On November 27, 1883, a disastrous fire consumed nearly the entire business portion of the town. From 1885 to 1894 Ocala made rapid growth and its population was augmented from 500 to 5000. Its business strides and development during these years was wonderful. First came the orange industry, and then the discovery of phosphate by Mr. Albertus Vogt in 1889 to stimulate its phenomenal development along all lines of expansion.

It is needless to refer to the effects of the disastrous freezes and the failure of our banks that wiped out in a day half a million of accumulated wealth. But we have bravely borne all these paralyzing influences and are

LOW PRICE OF COTTON

The long staple product, of which the farmers of Marion county grew a larger acreage crop this season than they have produced for years, has been on the steady decline and now only 4½ cents per pound is paid for it in the seed and 16½ cents for the ginned product, and this price for a strictly A 1 article. Notwithstanding this decline the article has been coming in quite freely, and those buying have been kept quite busy receiving it.

AN IMPORTANT DIFFERENCE

To make it apparent to thousands, who think themselves ill, that they are not afflicted with any disease, but that the system simply needs cleansing, is to bring comfort home to their hearts, as a restive condition is easily cured by using Syrup of Figs. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and sold by all druggists.
